"VETERANS' NIGHT"

Anderson Camp and Auxiliary Entertained—Patriotic Societies Well Represented

Anderson Camp, Sons of Union Veterans, and its Auxiliary, observed Veterans Night last Wednesday, bringing out a large attendance with several of the local patriotic organizations represented. Comrades Huntley, Philbrick and Kelley were honor guests. Supper was in charge of Mrs. Carrie Winchenbaugh, and in the entertainment following each of the organizations presented features.

The program opened with the singing of "America" and invocation by the chaplain of Anderson Camp, Edwin Mullen. Commander Herman Winchenbaugh made introductory remarks and assumed the role of master of ceremonies in his usual efficient manner. Col. E. K. Gould, representing the Camp, extended greetings to the veterans and visitors. Margaret Winslow in dance numbers was also a feature put on by the camp. Mrs. Maude Blodgett representing Lady Knox Chapter D.A.R., told in an interesting manner of the famous Burnham Tavern at Machias, also of the "Powder Journey" made by Hannah and Rebecca Weston.

Edwin Libby Relief Corps presented as its feature musical readings by Mrs. Blanche Morton, with Mrs. Nettie Averill at the piano, and Ruth Mayhew Tent, D.U.V., had three youthful dancers, Alfred Chapman, Martha Seavey and Barbara Newbert in delightful offerings. The Auxiliary, Sons of Union Veterans, presented Ruth and Eleanor Harper and Catherine Chisholm in violin, trumpet and piano selections, both solo and ensemble.

THE THREE CLUKEYS

G. M. Hatch Notes An Interesting Coincidence In His "Turf Topics"

The year old called Skippydale that is to be sold at New York the last week in November is out of the paces mare Miss Quincy, 2:08, that P. V. Fairfield owned and raced in the Simmons Stable driven by "Ish" Patterson. Skippydale is by Abbedale, 2:01 1/4. It was generally understood that Mr. Fairfield sent the mare to Village Farm to be bred but she may have been purchased by that farm which has been making selection of approved mares for breeding to its premier sire.

They credit Henry Clukey with having won thirty-four races the past season, eleven of them having been "copped" by the trotter Peter Pokey, 2:07, and seven by Henry's own trotter Volunteer. Billy Strathmore not quite himself perhaps after four fast heats at Union in July had five credits.

The memory of Kinney Silk, 2:06 1/4, that Chappelle raced so successfully for Thomas J. Kelly will ever be green in the minds of Maine racing fans. His own brother, Rex Silk, 2:11 1/4, a hopeful purchase sold recently at Topfield for $45. He showed promise but never could quite make good with the application of the said test.

Vassar, 2:07, got sixteen in the list all but one pacers. The best of these was Northern Spy (p), 2:12 1/4, who got his record at Rochester, N. H. The Spy horse was gray, nearly white, raised by W. S. Ham in Dover, Me. I think Ralph Burrill gave him his early training. He was sold and used as a gambling machine. Win or lose just the way the most money was. I recall his going in 2:10 one day but he never got the mark there. A daughter of Vassar produced Mary Q. (p), 2:13, a rather good mare the season she was driven by Walter Webb for Col. Morrill of Pittsfield.

There are three horse pilots in Maine by the name of Clukey and singularly enough all have the same initial letter. Henry, Harry and Horace. It is pretty hard to keep them separate and distinct even though it has been the effort of most writers for the press.

Lots of ads about that racing commission in Massachusetts. We hope that if any betting law is passed in Maine that the interests of the fair and owners of trotters and pacers will be properly protected. Not that the runners have any chance in Maine as yet but there should not be too much of hedging around with restrictions in the instances of the fairs.

Notice by The Globe that Gene Hayes, Chester Stewart and Patrick Doherty are nicely tucked in for the winter at Readville. All three are pretty well known in Maine. Gene Hayes looked after race horses at Belfast years ago and helped to make a reputation for the get of Chestnut Peter (3), 2:06 1/4. Chet Stewart was in Brunswick and Pat Doherty lived for years at Houlton where he trained and raced after coming from the region farther east. Mr. Doherty owned Delza Patch (p) 2:09 1/4, by Dan Patch and raised one or more colts from her.

CITY FATHERS CHECK UP

And Learn Many Interesting Things From the Annual Municipal Reports

Albert R. Havener, chief engineer of the Fire Department, reports that his men answered calls at the rate of one in almost every third day. To be exact they answered 38 box alarms, 78 still alarms and three out of town calls, a total of 119.

In taking account of stock he finds that the department has 7000 feet of hose and on hand in different stages of wear; that the fire station has been thoroughly repaired, all ladders scraped and varnished and general repairs made to the station and sleeping quarters so that Rockland now has one of the best fire stations in the State. The apparatus is in good condition except that the small pump needs paint badly. Chief Engineer Havener recommends early painting of the machine, and that the La France pump be touched up and varnished. He also recommended that the 40-gallon chemical tanks, which are of soda and acid type, be changed into the carbon dioxide gas type, which is less expensive to operate and safer for the firemen. This would involve very little expense. The placing of a new siren at the corner of Main and Limerock streets is deemed essential.

Chief Havener says that the department has been ready and willing at all times to respond to all demands, as is shown by the fact that fires have not spread from the building in which they originated.

In his capacity as building inspector Mr. Havener says he has inspected every theatre once each week and found them complying with the rules in all respects; also the dance halls and other places of amusement. Empire Theatre has been condemned for public gatherings until repairs have been made. Rubbish back of stores has been cleaned up and cellars have likewise been treated. The inspector has caused many chimneys to be repaired and rebuilt as a further protection against fire.

Chief Havener's report was very complete and satisfactory.

The Highway Department

The Commissioner of Public Works seldom has an opportunity to report money in the till after the year's work is over, but this is the good fortune of Commissioner Peter W. Edwards at this time. Here is a brief summary of his statistics: Highways—appropriation and receipts, $21,676; disbursements, $19,131; unexpended, $2,545; sidewalks—appropriations, $500; disbursements, $176; unexpended, $323; sewers—appropriation and receipts, $1575; disbursements, $4,076; overdrawn, $2,501; city dump—appropriation, $936; disbursements, $1162; overdrawn, $226; public landing—appropriation and receipts, $985; disbursements, $2,364; overdrawn, $1380; removing snow—appropriation and receipts, $7155; disbursements, $6889; unexpended, $265.

The comparatively heavy overdraft in the sewer department is accounted for—as the reader has doubtless divined—by the heavy expense of the Pleasant street job—$3,481.

The Welfare Department

The story of this important branch of city affairs is thus told by Louis A. Walker, chairman of the overseers of the poor.

"This has been a year of steadily increasing burdens upon the Poor Department. We have exercised constant vigilance in protecting the city from charges which properly belong to other municipalities or to the state and have kept expenses for relief as low as is consistent with public safety. With the system of records and accounting which we have installed, it should be possible to make further savings. It should be noted in this connection that about $2,500 of our disbursements are for bills incurred before November 7, 1933. The system now in operation will prevent the loading of expenses from one municipal year upon another and make the reports a more accurate picture of results for a given municipal year.

"A. S. Leonard and wife took charge of the City Farm and Home, April 1, 1934, succeeding Charles A. Weymouth, deceased, and have given a very satisfactory administration, considering the destitution of equipment which existed both inside and outside at the time they took charge. There are now 17 inmates at the Almshouse. We feel that we have a right to expect even better results from the City Farm another year,

COURT OFFICIALS BUSY

With Variety Of Criminal Cases—Convinced Of Kiskilas' Innocence

William Donohue of Owl's Head was before Recorder Otis yesterday on a serious charge, with Madeline Curtis, 16, of Ash Point as the complainant. The girl alleges that Donohue carried her forcibly in his car to a gravel pit near Power House hill, that she struggled and managed to escape after biting one of her alleged abductor's hands.

The State, represented by County Attorney Burrows presented evidence of a corroborative nature, two telephone employees testifying that they saw her coming from the premises, while another witness told of giving her a ride to Rockland. It was also brought out that the girl's hat was found in Donohue's car.

The defense, represented by Attorney Tirrell offered no evidence, and Donohue was placed under $2000 bail for appearance at the February term of Superior Court.

Floyd Berry was convicted of tipsy driving, fined $200 and costs and sentenced to 60 days in jail. It developed that Patrolman Chapman pursued Berry, who, taking refuge beyond the South Thomaston line, defied Chapman to arrest him. This the officer did later, after getting a warrant. During the chase the officer discharged his revolver twice in the air. Berry was represented by Attorney Tirrell, and appealed. Joseph Griffin who was with Berry was fined $5 for obstructing an officer.

Leon Murray was before the Court yesterday on a tipsy driving charge, being fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days in jail, with 30 days additional in default of payment of fine. Tirrell for the respondent; County Attorney Burrows for the State.

Recently there was reported in these columns the case of the State vs. Eli Karl and Alfred Kiskila, who were charged with the illegal possession of moose meat. Wardens found a roast in the Kiskila home and maintained that it was part of the carcass of a moose. A brother of the respondents, who had studied for federal appointment as a meat inspector, stoutly asserted that the exhibit in evidence was a beef shank.

Recorder Otis imposed a fine of $100 each on the young men, but entered an appeal for them in order that more expert testimony might be sought, a position in which County Attorney Burrows heartily coincided. A canvass of many butchers and meat cutters in Knox County brought a wide divergence of opinion. County Attorney Burrows paid a visit to the plant of the Black & Gay Canning Co. at Thomaston, where similar meat is being packed. There a large number of bones were found that matched perfectly with the one in evidence, declared by the Kiskilas to be a beef shank.

County Attorney Burrows is now satisfied that the Kiskilas told the truth, and move to have the case not pressed when Superior Court meets. The members of the Kiskila family are delighted with the outcome and grateful to Mr. Burrows for his fair stand in the case.

UNIVERSALISTS CALL PASTOR

Church So Fortunate As To Obtain Services Of Dr. John Smith Lowe

At a meeting of the parish of First Universalist Church last night a unanimous call was extended to Dr. John Smith Lowe of Boston to be pastor, succeeding Rev. George H. Welch who recently resigned. It is learned that Dr. Lowe will assume his duties at once.

A feature of the meeting was the presentation by E. E. Stoddard, treasurer, of the financial standing of the church, showing no debts and a balance of approximately $200 in cash, all bills paid up to and including Dec. 2 and an invested fund of $12,000 paying interest. The church while feeling the depression takes pride in having been able to pay the minister's salary monthly and in keeping all other expenses as accrued. The increased attendance and renewed interest since Dr. Lowe has been supplying the pulpit caused the parish to look to the future with confidence.

Who's Who in America" has this to say of the new pastor: "John Smith Lowe, born in Watertown, N. Y., 1878, son of Leonard S. and Mary M. (Kimball) Lowe; attended St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., 1898-1903; graduate Canton School of Theology (same university) 1903; Doctor of Divinity Degree, Lombard College, Galesburg, Ill.; married Adelaide E. Bouck of Gouverneur, N. Y., July 1, 1903; ordained ministry, Universalist Church 1901; pastor LaCrosse, Wis., 1903-1910; Church of Mediator, Providence, R. I., 1910-1917; elected general superintendent of Universalist Churches of America 1917; occupied position for 12 years; minister Second Church of Edmondston, Boston; chaplain Coast Artillery Corps U.S.A., 1910-1917; a Mason."

Dr. Lowe has a summer home at Round Pond.

CHARTER ASKED FOR

And Rockland Will Have Organization of "Sons of the American Legion"

The committee for the organization of Sons of American Legion met Friday night at Legion hall. Sufficient names were presented and a charter has been applied for. Boys desiring to be charter members are to make application before Jan. 1st. Rules governing membership are:

All male descendants, adopted sons and stepsons, of members of the American Legion, and such descendants of male and female veterans who died in service during the World War, all who died subsequent to the honorable discharge from such service, shall be eligible to membership, in the Sons of the American Legion.

There shall be no form or class of membership except an active membership.

The committee for organization comprises Gerald Margeson, chairman, Raymond Fogarty, Francis Havener, Irving Curtis, Edward Newhall, A. B. Huntley, Earl Alden, Hector Staples and Michael Ristano.

Donald H. Fuller recently left his watch chain at a local jeweler's to be repaired, but when he called for it no chain was there. Suspicion fell upon a Rockport boy who had taken some old gold to the store for sale. The hunch proved to be correct, and the chain, somewhat damaged, was found in another jewelry store. Reparation was made, and no court action was taken.

Sister-In-Law of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh Dies In Pasadena, Calif.

Mrs. Aubrey N. Morgan, daughter of the late Dwight W. Morrow and sister-in-law of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, died yesterday in a Pasadena hospital after a long illness.

Present at her bedside when she died was her husband and her mother, Mrs. Morrow, widow of the late United States ambassador to Mexico, flew to Pasadena a week ago from the Morrow home in Englewood, N. J.

"She was conscious until the end," Mrs. Morgan underwent an operation for appendicitis Nov. 10. Pneumonia set in later. When her condition became serious Mrs. Morrow hurried to the coast. She remained almost constantly at the bedside of her daughter.

Funeral arrangements, it was understood, are being held up pending word from Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, who were reported in the East.

MAINE-IAC AT LARGE

From Out of the Jam of St. Pete Traffic Comes Another Gay Letter

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

St. Petersburg Nov. 25

Sunset on the Gulf of Mexico! The very word "Mexico" brings to mind adventure and the old world. And to be out on the keys, of the west coast of Florida, watching such a sunset fills each breath with the mysterious and infinite. The even tone of such a scene is impressive. You see the level sand, the perfectly unbroken horizon, and the cloudless sky.

On my desk is a beautiful poinsettia. There are three huge plants in the yard, just covered with flowers, from 8 to 12 inches across.

The traffic problem has reached St. Pete. One is fortunate to find a place to park within three blocks of Central Avenue. Remember—that the business section on Central Avenue is practically a mile long. You fill that with cars, then First and Second Avenues North, and First and Second Avenues South, and you will have a few hundred autos.

And the Post Office lines! It takes me from 20 to 30 minutes to get my mail on its way.

The All-State dancing societies here are fun. Membership is by invitation, and it costs one or two dollars only for five months of weekly dances. And boy! what a variety of steps and partners!

One needs to keep his eyes open while driving around here. With each tourist bringing his own State laws, as to passing and turning around, we have one of the world's greatest collection of traffic ordinances.

The second Maine Society meeting was held the 20th; 103 answered the roll call, and 25 of these were in St. Pete for the first time. A new president was elected, John I. Wood of Bucksport. Entertainment was provided in the form of an exceptionally fine trio of women singers, also ice cream.

Visited Clearwater this afternoon. Will tell you about it next time.

A HAPPY REUNION

George R. Ewell Homestead On the Medomak Shelters Congenial Party

Waldoboro on the Medomak, the scene of many an Indian feast, the fertile region at which Yarmouth and other pioneers marveled, the land extolled by Gen. Waldo in the Eighteenth century to encourage immigration and settlement, witnessed, Thanksgiving Day, 1934, another family reunion at the early American type George R. Ewell homestead, recently become the property of John C. Sansom.

In the quaint Dutch oven room, with its large, cheery fireplace, a table was laden with turkey and all the "fixins". Fifteen persons were grouped about the board, including the seven Sansom brothers and sisters, wives and children. The company had never before been gathered under a single roof. There were Miss Sarah A. Sansom, Mr. and Mrs. William Sansom, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund B. Sansom, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anastasio, all of Rockland; Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Smith, daughter Marjorie and son Kenneth, all of Bath; Mr. and Mrs. Abram Sansom and daughter Kitty, all of Belfast; and John C. Sansom of Waldoboro.

Yellowed newspapers, printed in Maine and in Massachusetts, and dated back to the Civil War were unearthed in the old farmhouse, besides personal letters of other years. Beano and other games were played. Prizes of a more or less humorous nature were awarded to all who won games. The weather being foggy, snapshots could not be taken, but everybody contributed heartily to the general pleasure and consequently shared richly in the delightful holiday program.

METHEBESIC CLUB

Program Friday Related To Women In Medicine, Miss Daly In Charge

The Methebesic Club met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clara Thurston, with Mrs. Thurston, Mrs. Julia Murray and Mrs. Jane Beach as hostesses, and with 37 members and three guests in attendance, a most interesting program of "Women in Medicine" was presented under the chairmanship of Miss Ellen Daly, the gracious and efficient superintendent at Knox Hospital.

Current events pertaining to the program subject were given by Mrs. Minnie Rogers, Mrs. Laura Maxey and Mrs. Addie Small. Miss Daly's paper given as a leader for those by Mrs. Alice Karl and Mrs. Elizabeth Davis, presented a resume of the best known women in medicine, doctors and nurses, a formidable list when it is said that women as yet have gone little beyond a system in the field of medicine.

She told of Dr. Anna Hamilton of Bordeaux, France, probably the most accomplished woman in medicine today, whom she had met when attending a convention at the Bordeaux School of Nursing. Miss Daly gave a vivid picture of Dr. Hamilton, telling of her remarkable linguistic ability demonstrated at the convention in meeting representatives from many countries, a woman who despite her marvelous accomplishments in the field of medicine remains fine and sweet, loving her garden and the development of cultural arts. Of Jean Broadhurst famed in laboratory research; Dr. Sarah Jordan now identified with the Lahey Clinic, Boston; Dr. Mary Moore identified with Child Welfare work in Massachusetts. In the field of nursing Miss Daly told of Mary Adelaide Nutting, of the staff of Columbia University; Lillian D. Wald, identified with the famous Henry Street Settlement upon which Miss Wald has written two or three books; Helen Scott Hay, director of the first American Relief Expedition to the World War, who has established schools of nursing in many foreign countries and has been decorated by several of these countries in recognition thereof; Clara Dutton Noyes, prominent in Red Cross work during the World War and largely responsible for the establishment of the Memorial School of Nursing at Bordeaux dedicated to American nurses who died on French soil; Mary Breckenridge whose work with frontier mothers and babies is a fine piece of work; Anna Warburton Goodrich who at the close of the World War established the Public Health Nursing School in connection with Yale University; Teresa Richmond Anderson of Augusta, Maine, known to many Rockland people, who has been with the Maine Public Health Association for 12 years, and of whom Miss Daly said, "Probably no nurse in Maine has done more for nursing in the State than Mrs. Anderson"; Harriet Bailey whose work with the mentally sick has been outstanding, a native of Maine, author of many text books for nursing in mental diseases considered authorities, now living in Bangor. Mrs. Karl's paper was on Major Julia Stimson who has made many Rockland acquaintances during her summer visits with Miss Ruth Cobb of St. Louis at Coopers Beach. Miss Stimson with whom Miss Cobb was associated in army nursing in France during the World War is the first woman in the United States to bear the ranking of major. She heads the army nurses in this country, an army in themselves. Mrs. Karl read portions of Miss Stimson's book "Finding Themselves," letters written home to her parents from France and England during the War. Miss Daly who also associated with Miss Stimson in France gave a vivid word picture of her, picturing her as a charming, energetic woman, extremely modest regarding her own attainments, very modern in her views, and a brilliant conversationalist. On her recall from France in 1919, Miss Stimson was awarded a medal by the United States government for distinguished service; also received medals from France and England. Through difficulties encountered in hospital and camp discipline in France due to the status of a nurse, Miss Stimson made a drive to have a nurse's position included as a part of army ranking; this was accomplished, army nurses now having rankings beginning with Second Lieutenant up to Major, Miss Stimson's title.

Mrs. Davis told of Jane Delano who was the first director of the American Red Cross Nursing Service; also in the World War as superintendent of Army and Navy Nurses Corps, resigning to be at the head of the Red Cross nurses. Though Miss Delano died in 1919 her Red Cross program was so extensive that it is still being carried on along her plans. She was the author of the text book "Home Nursing and Hygiene in the Home". Her body rests in the Arlington Cemetery. She left bequests in her will for nursing service in outlying posts in the

STRAND WEDNESDAY-THURSDAY

Helen Westley as the social arbiter of the "400" welcomes IRENE DUNNE, in spite of divorce rumors, into her select circle in "THE AGE OF INNOCENCE," RKO-Radio's production of the gripping Edith Wharton romance of New York in the strait-laced Seventies. Julie Hayden, Miss Dugan's rival for the affection of JOHN BOLES, meekly joins in the welcome.

Filmed from the highly popular novel by Edith Wharton, the story deals with that period in America when the proprieties were so rigidly enforced that happiness was often sacrificed in order to appease the great God of Appearance. Boles enacts the role of a scion of New York's social elite who is loved by two women, one of whom is accepted in the upper circles and the other deemed beyond the pale because she is contemplating a divorce. The latter woman is played by Irene Dunne in the RKO-Radio screen drama, and Julie Hayden portrays the girl to whom Boles finds himself engaged against the dictates of his heart—adv.

United States, one of these Jane Delano caring for people on Matinicus and other islands on the coast of Maine, the nurse travelling on the "Sunbeam".

At the close of the formal program, Miss Daly told informally of Dr. Alice Hamilton of Harvard University who was sent to Geneva in her connection with sociology; she is active in infantile paralysis research and the study of industrial diseases. Miss Daly also told most interestingly of the definite advancement of the nurse from the old days, stating that gradually states are beginning to recognize the nurse as an intelligent woman and not merely a servant of a machine.

A delightful feature of the afternoon were the songs "To the Sun" and "Dawn" by Pearl G. Curran, sung by Mrs. Dannie Rose Gardner, soprano with Mrs. Ruth E. Sanborn at the piano. Mrs. Gardner's lovely voice and fine diction were heard with marked pleasure. Mrs. Irene Walker, chairman of the music committee, prefaced Mrs. Gardner's songs with a brief sketch of Mrs. Curran's life. The meeting Friday, Dec. 14, will be at Grand Army hall, with Mrs. Laura Maxey, Mrs. Maude Blodgett and Anna Nelson as hostesses. At this meeting the annual donation of gifts for Christmas distribution will be made. The packages are to be pretty wrapped and plainly labeled with the name of the article, age and sex of child. This year donations of vegetables and other food articles will be received, to be distributed where needed by the benevolent committee headed by Mrs. Minnie Rogers. The subject of the program will be "Women in Philanthropy and Religion," with Mrs. Ethel Newcomb as leader and Mrs. Louise Ingraham assisting.

WITH THE BOWLERS

Perry's Market stepped on the Star Alley team last night, but rather lightly, the margin of victory being 11 pins. McKinney had high single (124) but high total went to Mitchell Perry's Market—Gardner 498, Mitchell 522, total 2428.

Star Alleys—McKinney 498, Howard 463, Dandeneau 472, Kimball 476, Thomas 511, total 2417.

From Gardner comes word via "Ty" Cobb that they have a team of pin boys over there that would like to arrange a game with the best team that can be assembled at the Star Alleys with a return match to be rolled in Gardner. Don't think they are easy to beat says "Ty" who adds that neither he or Bill Goggin would roll to give the local boys a chance to win. "Remember me to all the folks in Rockland adds 'Ty,' 'tell them I am still a hundred bowler.'"

MISS LAMB'S PUPILS

Show Admirable Results of Studies Under Effa Ellis Fairfield Method

Miss Mabel F. Lamb, exponent of the Effa Ellis Fairfield music teaching method, recently presented a group of her piano pupils in a delightful informal get-together of parents, pupils and friends. Miss Lamb says of herself that she is a teacher who is trying to learn something as well as to teach, realizing the value to be derived in personal contact with a group of fine boys and girls and the pleasant friendship with parents whose cooperative spirit is much appreciated.

Miss Lamb's opening presentation was given by Sonia Corner, age six, Alice Blaney, five, and Marguerite Blaney, four, a group from the creative music class, featuring bird calls, singing and playing, stories, poems, rhythmic drills, harmony, rainbow colors, rhythmic counting, gaily calls, dancing, improvising, tonal transposition, etc., in practically every feature of kindergarten work. Later a demonstration in harmony was given by William East in chord sentences; David Curtis demonstrated major, minor, diminished and augmented chords and resolutions; and Stanley Murray played major chords, naturals, sharps, double sharps, flats and double flats.

The program:

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his marital troubles. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "Nance" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny had tied her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter which a confederate stole from her hand outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

"Delivers bootleg. He took a chance for a friend."

"You may go," said Dan McNamara to the chauffeur. "Take your car and beat it. But I'll remember you and if you pull any rough stuff in this city I'll land you out in the grass. On your way."

The man fled promptly, and Dan turned to the ex-soldier. "I've got Nance out at my house," he explained. "Doctor Burt has fixed her up and I'm not going to turn her in. Neither am I going to turn her out, because she'd be picked up. That saddle nose of hers is a dead-give-away."

The man nodded indignantly. "We've got to find a quiet spot for your friend, too," the chief went on meditatively. "A man with three bullet holes in his head is in an embarrassing fix—when he's wanted. So we'll take him out to my house, too. That's the only safe place I can think of."

"How about me?"

"You've been a soldier, so I suppose you can carry out orders?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, your orders are to come out to my house, too, and take care of your friend. The doctor will call every day and tell you what to do. And you'll have to do the cooking."

"I can do that, too. Not fancy, but they can eat it."

"All right, you've got a job and a holding-up place as well. I'll go home now and get my car and come back for you and your friend. Meanwhile don't you get cold feet and disappear. I want to talk to you some more. I want to find out all about Nance Belden, and you and your friend might be able to give a line on her."

"I don't know anything about her, Chief, except that her real name is Penelope Gatlin."

Dan McNamara clasped his corrugated brow in both hands and pondered. "Gatlin? Gatlin? Penelope Gatlin? Now, where have I run across that name in my business? I don't usually forget names, and I seem to remember I had a call once for somebody by that name or else somebody by that name called on me. It was a long time ago. I'll have to look that up—I wonder if there's anything in the files at headquarters."

It was midnight before Nance Belden's two friends were installed with her in Dan McNamara's house. Lanny looked both men over carefully and confided in the chief that she wouldn't trust either of them as far as she could throw a bear by its tail, to which Mr. McNamara replied that one of them couldn't raise any devilry if he wanted to, while the other dared not. Moreover, this latter was the only practical nurse he could secure. A trained nurse might talk on the other hand, this friend of Nance's had been educated to keep his mouth shut. "And a very great virtue," McNamara added. "His freedom is in my keeping and my honor is in his, so we have to trust each other. Besides, it's high time you got home."

The phone rang and Dan answered it. When he rejoined Lanny he was smiling broadly. "You're a bum mopper up," he accused. "That was Flynn, one of the detective sergeants on watch at your house. He found two drops of blood you overlooked, so he thinks you and Nance are in the house but refuse to an-

lowed his partner into the drawing room, and sat down heavily on a divan.

"Is this to be a long interview?" Lanny asked cheerfully.

P. Flynn shook his head. "A minute or two."

"Then I'll not bother giving you anything to drink."

"Well, it might take ten minutes, at that," Flynn countered.

Lanny mixed her guests each a highball. P. Flynn drank half of his at a gulp, set down his glass and said:

"Well, where's Nance Belden?"

"I see by the papers she escaped from San Quentin about six hours ago."

"She came here," Flynn charged. "Prove it," Lanny challenged tartly; whereupon Flynn went out into the entrance hall and returned, dragging the end of the hall runner with him. He turned it over and revealed a large dark red spot. "Blood," he announced.

Angeliotti touched the spot. "Fresh blood?"

"Human blood," Flynn went on. "Quite a clot of it. She must have fainted after Miss Lanning let her in. Undoubtedly she lay several minutes in the hall bleeding while Miss Lanning was fixing a bed for her."

"We know she came here," Angeliotti charged. "We found two spots of blood on the sidewalk."

"That settles it," Flynn declared with ponderous finality. "Miss Lanning, you have this female convict secreted in your house, and I advise you to give her up."

"Search my house," Lanny offered in a queer, choked voice. She loathed herself for having overlooked that large blood stain on her hall runner.

Flynn and Angeliotti needed no second invitation. They searched the house thoroughly and returned to the little drawing room to finish their drinks.

"You've taken her away," Flynn charged. "Where did you take her?"

"If you're such good detectives, go find her," Lanny was getting her courage back again. "She did come here, but I wasn't fool enough to receive her. She came in a car with two men and she did faint in my hallway and lie there for a little while. Of course she expected—why, I can't imagine—that I'd hide her and nurse her. But she's neither a friend nor a relative of mine; she met me once in Doctor Burt's office where I am employed and took a liking to me—in her funny way. She's a psycho-neurotic personality. She wrote me, asking me to call upon her, and I did—like a fool—because I felt sorry for her. She should be in a sanitarium, not a jail."

"Who brought her to Doctor Burt's office?"

"Chief McNamara."

Messrs. Flynn and Angeliotti sat up. They glanced slowly at each other. "The old man's been up to his old tricks again," said Flynn. "What became of Nance Belden after you refused to receive her?"

"She left in the automobile," Lanny was careful not to state which automobile or whose.

"You're an accessory to her escape. It was your duty, as a citizen, to hold her here, telephone police headquarters and have her taken down to the emergency hospital for treatment. You can go to the pen for this."

"Get out of my house," Lanny commanded fiercely.

"Sure, but you come with us," thus Angeliotti.

"You can't arrest me without a warrant."

"I said before, you ain't such a good lawyer. We can always pick up anybody that carries a gun without a permit. Into your hat and coat, Miss Lanning, and come with us."

"I'll telephone my lawyer and then go with you," said Lanny with dignity.

"Nothing doing," Flynn declared firmly.

"You two dare lay hands on me and I'll have you both broke, understand. Be careful. Call up Chief McNamara before you get fresh with me. The telephone is in the kitchen."

Flynn went into the kitchen and called up Dan McNamara. He was much subdued upon his return, and Lanny smiled. "We'll get you yet," he growled. "You must have a drag with the chief. He's pulled us off the case. Good night."

When they had gone, Lanny put out the hall light and watched them from behind the door curtain. The two crossed the street to their car, climbed in and settled down for an all-night vigil—at least so Lanny decided.

So she dragged the hall runner into the kitchen, scrubbed the bloody spot thoroughly and dried it over the gas stove, reviling herself the while.

To the surprise of the machine gunner, Chief Dan McNamara did not ask him a single personal question—not even his name. Nor did he question him regarding his wounded friend. He and the chief partook of a breakfast which the Tommy man prepared, and discussed marksmanship, wounds, battles and sudden death. As the chief was leaving, he gave the machine gunner a list of tradesmen who supplied his house, and told him to telephone his orders; when delivery was made, they were to be left on a table in the basement.

"And don't you answer the telephone and don't show yourself outside or near the front windows," he warned.

The fellow nodded. "By the way, Chief, what's going to become of that speed boat? It belongs to Nance. She bought it for forty-five hundred dollars."

McNamara sat down and looked his amazement. "She paid forty-five hundred dollars for that boat and yet she was doing time for pinching silk stockings? I don't like to ask you any questions you might be embarrassed to answer, boy, but today will be a total loss to me unless I find out where she keeps her bank roll."

"That's Nance's business and I'll not discuss it. She sent the check out in the letter outlining her plan of escape."

"Who received the letter?"

"A friend who showed it to us—and we decided to help Nance out. We both owed her a debt we couldn't see no other way of paying."

"But didn't you figure out the risks?"

"Sure—an' discounted 'em. Machine-gun fire ain't no new thing to us. We figured them guards wasn't top-notch machine gunners anyhow—that is at low ranges. They know how to handle their guns, but they don't have their regular periods of target practice on the range, like a soldier does. In our boat, headed straight away from the fire at forty-five miles an hour, it would take an expert to get on us. An' they wouldn't know for sure whether we were accomplices or not until Nance reached the boat and we started pullin' her in; then, of course, they'd let us have it."

"There were eight other boats in the cove. Six of 'em was in our pay an' they was strung along in a line, so close together that as we run down the line o' them the guards would hold their fire for fear o' riddlin' innocent parties."

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. BELAND

Basketball

A good game to play and a great game to watch, but what strenuous activity it can be! Indeed, some coaches regard it as the most strenuous of our popular sports.

Disregarding that point, we do know that it is full of possibilities for strain, particularly upon the heart. Fortunately, most boys and girls playing basketball are under adult supervision or we would see far more damage than is actually the case. And fortunately too, the practice of requiring medical examinations of all team candidates is becoming quite general.

If this is not the case in your community, and you happen to be the father or mother of a growing boy or girl, I urge you to give some thought to the situation. Discuss it with your family physician and with the school principal. Let your child be wrong idea, may I emphasize that it isn't the game that is at fault nor would I have it discontinued anywhere. The points to consider are these: the child, his health, strength, fitness, heart condition; the length of the game or practice period; and the size and abilities of the other players.

In other words, we should always be sure that the game is suitable to the individual child, and that it isn't overdone. We must be sure, too, that correct diet and ample sleep are accompaniments of any strenuous sport.

The value of fresh milk as a healthful food, and how a problem concerning it was met in one community, will be the subject of Dr. Ireland's next article.

Labor Receives Almost Half of Each Steel Dollar

WHERE THE STEEL DOLLAR WENT

from 1924-1933

PAYROLLS of the steel industry take 41 cents out of every dollar received from gross sales, and are the largest single expense item in steel mill operation, according to figures received by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

This was revealed by an analysis made of the major expenses from 1924 through 1933 of steel companies representing 75 per cent of the steel-making capacity of the country.

Only 6 1/2 cents of the gross sales dollar during the 10-year period were paid to stockholders as dividends, and only one cent was added to surplus.

Six cents from each sales dollar were charged off for depreciation and obsolescence of equipment and facilities. Tax payments of all kinds took an average of 4 1/2 cents a year during the past ten years. One cent was paid out in interest charges.

The 40 cents remaining from the gross sales dollar after these items had been paid were spent for raw materials and for all the other expenses.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Practical joking is a popular pastime along Broadway—anything for a laugh. That has been the rule for a long, long time. Bill Phelon, a baseball writer on the Cincinnati Times-Star and the old Morning Telegraph, was a close friend of Bill Hanna, who wrote baseball for the old New York Sun. Hanna, slight and nervous, was a hypochondriac and was always calling on doctors or going to sanitariums. One night, Phelon walking down Broadway, encountered Hanna who was walking up. He greeted him casually and walked downtown and of course met Hanna whom he again greeted casually. Hanna blinked and returned the greeting somewhat anxiously. Phelon took another car ride and gave Hanna a third greeting. Then, according to the story, Hanna, believing he was seeing things, went to a sanitarium and gave himself up.

Another example with a newspaper connection, occurred on the old Herald. A report spread through the city room that a staff man was to be sent to Egypt to meet Theodore Roosevelt on his return from Africa. Naturally, there was great interest as to which would be the lucky one. Finally came a cable signed with the name, James Gordon Bennett, and addressed to an ambitious cub. It ordered him to proceed to Egypt immediately. The youngster's elation was none the less great because seemingly envious members of the staff assured him that the assignment meant that Bennett was keeping track of his work and that he was slated for big things. Rushing home, the cub showed the cable to his mother and while she was calling up family friends, he took it to his sweet-heart. Then he started in buying equipment. At that point two older members of the staff, having some consideration, broke the news to the kid that the cable was a fake.

Perhaps yacht race yarns are a bit dated, but one newspaper story calls for another. Thirty years ago, the editorial heads of the Evening World conceived the idea of covering the cup races from a captive balloon. All arrangements having been made, a big advertising campaign was carried out and attracted a lot of attention because of the novelty of the stunt. The reporter selected for the assignment had never been up in a balloon before and had been in the air only a few moments when he became deathly sick. The only messages he sent to the ground were pleas to be yanked down before he died. But the World carried a brilliant report of the race as seen from the balloon. It was written by a rewrite man from Associated Press reports.

The Sun also had an idea for covering that same race. In those days there was no wireless, of course. So a schooner was chartered and anchored near the stake boat. From the schooner, a short cable was run to shore, the cable connecting with a telegraph wire. Boats were chartered to pick up the various stories and dump them on the schooner. Thus, the Sun was assured of fast coverage.

It happened that the man assigned to the schooner was not only the best dressed reporter on the staff but also the most fastidious. To make sure he would be on the job early enough in the morning, he boarded the old schooner the night before. When the other boats arrived for the race, they were met with frantic pleas to be taken ashore. The schooner was infested with vermin, and the reporter feared he would be eaten alive. His pleas were disregarded but he was taken off each night thereafter.

Broadway eavesdropping: "He lost that movie publicity job the first week after he got it. He couldn't spell colossal."

Get a snicker out of this. An ace headquarters detective who has a reputation for always bringing in his man, sat down in the dining room of a hotel in the Times Square sector. When he had finished his luncheon, he looked for his new light felt hat. In its place, was hanging an old, greasy black skimmer. And what did the sleuth do? Why he shouted for the house detective! P. Demand Cleanliness In Soda Fountains

Visible Signs of Cleanliness Indicate Good Management

By Dr. J. Lynn Mahaffey
Director, New Jersey State Department of Health

When you eat at a restaurant, do you watch for the telltale signs that indicate whether or not the place is run with your health in mind? It is a good habit to form, for the vigilance of customers can be of great assistance to health officers in maintaining the sanitation of public eating places.

Clean dishes, spotless tablecloths or table tops, shining glassware and silver are, of course, indications that care is being taken and also that the management takes pride in cleanliness and observes it in handling food. A clean establishment has clean, tidy waiters. It has clean walls and ceiling and clean floors and counters. I have greater confidence in a restaurant with a sign like this: "Out patrons are invited to inspect our kitchen at all times."

Soda Fountains, Too

Do you look for indications of cleanliness at soda fountains? There is great opportunity for diseases to be spread at such places. Fountain clerks are sometimes careless about washing dishes and glasses, especially in the rush hours when many persons are lined up for something to eat and drink. The utensils are likely to be merely rinsed in lukewarm water, which itself is contaminated by previous washings. Such conditions are obviously unsafe, for infection may be passed along from one customer to others who follow him in the use of fork, spoon and drinking glass.

Since you cannot supervise the cleaning of the glass, fork and spoon you are to put in your mouth, your protection must come from patronizing those places where hot water and soap are used effectively or where single service paper cups and other utensils are used.

Competition is keen. Your patronage will encourage either the careful or the careless proprietor, depending on which one receives your trade. Which will it be?

Romance Surrounds Early

History of Lowly Tomato

The early history of the tomato is replete with romance, legends and fairy tales, writes a correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Disregarding the latter two, it is known that the tomato did not make its appearance in North America until about 1650, and then only as an ornamental bush with glowing, brilliant red "love apples" dangling from stems to tempt the Adams of that day.

The hated witches were reported as using tomatoes in their concoctions and cantations to "shoo" away devils and pronounce curses upon those who harangued them. One witch in early times was said to have used tomatoes in her soups and as sauces for her meats, but it was current belief of those about her that she was immune to poison and the bitter fire held by the beautiful red tomatoes she grew about her lowly hut.

The tomato is believed to have originated in one of the American tropics. It was eaten only by wild tribes, being called by them to-mati. Humboldt reported that Mexicans sowed tomato seeds among their maize, calling it to-mati, using it mainly for sauces and relishes to enrich their highly seasoned foods.

It was first introduced into Europe under the names of "mala Peruviana" and "pomi del Peru," thus giving substance to the idea that Peru was the first place the tomato was found.

Legends of the Unicorn

Once Were Believed True

The unicorn which figures in the British Royal Coat of Arms is emblematic of Scotland and was introduced in the Royal Coat of Arms at the time of the union of Scotland and England, says the Montreal Herald. The unicorn is a purely fabulous creature, having the head of a horse, the hind legs of an antelope, the tail of a lion and sometimes the beard of a goat. The horn which projects from the center of the forehead is similar to that of a narwhal.

Though as a rule savage and quarrelsome, the unicorn at mating-time was said to become very gentle to his mate, which is supposed to have given rise to the medieval idea that the unicorn was subdued to gentleness at the sight of a virgin, and would come and lay his head in her lap, which was the only means by which he could be caught, because of his swiftness and ferocity.

The picture of a unicorn on a drinking cup symbolized an ancient belief of the efficacy of the unicorn's horn (sometimes used as a drinking cup) against poison. Another medieval legend about the unicorn is that when it stooped to drink from a pool, its horn, dipping into the water, purified and rendered it sweet.

Colors of Races

In the diet of our ancestors is found the answer to the question, why the first men were black, the result of a diet consisting chiefly of vegetables and fruits, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. The addition of milk to the diet of some of them, evolved a skin of brownish hue. The Mongols of Asia, among the first to tend flocks of domesticated animals, mixed meat with their milk and fruit and vegetables, and thus developed the yellow race, of which the red race (American Indians) is an ethnological division. The addition of salt to the foods of the Caucasians exerted a bleaching influence that resulted in the evolution of the white race.

Hickory a Native American

The hickory has a special attraction because it is a native American tree. It is not, like the Norway maple or the English elm, of foreign ancestry. The Indians called it the pokibok, but in the course of time Americans dropped the first syllable. They used it for bows and for war clubs. It is now used for ax handles, wheel spokes, chairs and barrel hoops, and the like. A basket made of hickory strips will outlast the maker's lifetime. As a fuel burned in an open fireplace, it has no superior.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Many Named Washington

The following states have villages or towns named Washington: Maine (2), Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania (2), Virginia, West Virginia (2), North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Kentucky, Indiana, Tennessee, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and California (2).

Color of the Black Sea

The waters of the Black sea, of great importance to the Soviet republics of Russia, are not black, notes G. R. Turner, in the Kansas City Times. Nevertheless, there is ample justification for the name. It is visited in summer by violent storms that churn the water into an inky mass, and in the winter there drift over it heavy fogs that obscure the sunlight and lend a dark aspect to its surface.

STOP BAD BREATH

Thousands of people afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels, stimulating them to natural action, and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous cathartics does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no gripping pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with constipation with the attendant bad breath. Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two at bedtime for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Have Nice Supper and Listen To Oratory — Auxiliary Instituted

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Chester D. Stone Post was instituted and the officers installed Saturday night. Officers of the Post were also installed. The joint ceremony was very pleasingly conducted, a success despite howling winds and intermittent showers. Rain and howling winds just cannot dampen a veteran's spirits when his inner man is well padded with Saturday night beans as served by this auxiliary. Visiting officials were Department President Mrs. Evelyn Riggs of Auburn, always an interesting speaker and Mrs. Leroy P. Smith. Here for the first time her remarks drew very favorable comment. Other ladies also spoke. Department Commander Leroy P. Smith, speaker of the evening devoted his time to the seven-point program. Gentle and soft spoken, Commander Smith, as usual, held the interest of all. Vice Commander Cony of Westbrook also received a good hand. Chief of Staff Oliver R. Hamlin, the Dempsey of the V.F.W. and Comrade Charles G. Hewett also delivered addresses. Commander Bird Jameson was heard from at frequent intervals throughout the evening. Comrade Riggs of Auburn was right there with the berries. Mrs. Bertha Jameson is president of the auxiliary. Bird B. Jameson continues in command of the Post. Commander Jameson, Vice Commander Yount and the service officer attended service officers' school in Togus last week.

MEASLEY FIVE PINS

Was Sufficient To Take the Conceit Out of Goose Arey's Cohorts

The Tired Business Men's Bowling Association of Vinalhaven held another meeting at the Cascade alleys Friday night and some of the members must have been a trifle more tired than usual for the losing team was unable to gather strength enough to knock down a measley five-pin handicapped, which was the margin of defeat by which Leon "Goose" Arey's hurlers were humbled.

Indulging in the same tactics they employed last week when they came from behind with a smashing barrage of spares to win by a few pins, Ernest "Skip" Arey's Penny Catchers let the opposition have the first string by seven pins, regained a solitary one pin in the second string and let out on the home stretch to capture the last string by 11 pins and the match by five pins.

"Scottie" Littlefield took sweet revenge on Gene Hall for the past two beatings he had from Gene and trimmed him up as nice and brown as a well cooked turkey, and was heard to remark under his breath that if some of his teammates could only do as well, he wouldn't have to shell out after every one of these bowling matches.

Gene, in looking over his score said it looked more like a golf score than it did a bowling match, and thought his 68 was about par for the Cascade Alleys. But even if he was next to low man, Gene swore he could beat Frank A. Winslow of The Courier-Gazette, any time, any place, for anything, or nothing. Ambrose Peterson, who had bowled the entire match without a sign of a spare, in his very last frame, with uncertainty at its height, whisked the pins off the alley in the twinkling of an eye for a grand strike, and then amid the groans of his teammates only made three extra pins on it.

"Skip" Arey led all the contestants for the total with 276, which was nothing to write home about, but the closeness of the match made everybody agree with Gene Hall when he quoted Prof. Einstein and said, "It isn't the size of the strings, it's their relativity."

Frank Grimes, while on the losing side in bowling, was able by some well placed bets to smoke several fine cigars at the expense of the winners and when he paid his bowling bill took keen delight in blowing smoke in the faces of the boys who had gathered around to sympathize with him.

Captain "Goose" has made another date for next Wednesday night and says he is resolved to fight it out on these lines if it takes all winter to win a match, while Captain "Skip" says it will be well into the spring before any match takes place if he can do anything about it.

Following is the score, and gentle reader, when you peruse the same, kindly remember that some of these boys are old enough to be your grandfather.

OUR CARL ARRIVES

Begins Active Work in Washington—His Secretaries In Interesting Quarters

A Washington special says: "Representative E. C. Moran, Jr., of the Second Maine Congressional District arrived in Washington Sunday to attend a hearing Monday on the Dutch elm disease, the gypsy moth and the white pine blister rust. Also expected for the hearing is Commissioner of Agriculture Frank B. Washburn of Maine and Walter O. Frost of the Maine State Forestry Service.

"Mr. Moran said before he left Maine he had a conference with Mr. Washburn and suggested appointment of a rural council by Gov. Bram to organize Maine agriculture so that it might become vocal in its own behalf. He suggested that the council include Washburn, Harry Crawford of the Maine State Grange and an agricultural extension service worker. The Dutch elm disease should be one of the first subjects considered by the council, Mr. Moran said.

"Mr. Moran was accompanied to Washington by Mrs. Moran and their son Paul, and will remain here through the coming session of Congress."

Personal letters received from Miss Ethel J. Smalley—Congressman Moran's secretary—note her arrival there, together with Miss Crowley of Lewiston, who is now a member of the Congressman's office staff. They made the journey by motor after a Thanksgiving dinner at Miss Crowley's home in Lewiston, stopping over night in Hartford and Philadelphia. The letters tell chatfully of an interesting and successful trip.

Congressman Moran's secretaries temporarily are staying at the American War Mothers' home on New Hampshire avenue. Mrs. Ochiltree, the National President has her office there in addition to rooms. She sponsored and fought for the issue of a Mother's Day stamp. Each room in the house is furnished by the different chapters all over the country. Our room, which we are occupying, is especially reserved for the War Mothers who go to Washington and desire to stay there for a short time. It is a lovely room with polished maple furniture, candlewick spreads, etc. Several "notables" pictures hang on the walls—Senator Reed's, Ruth Bryan Owen's, Senator Bingham's, etc.

Lowly Weasel Furnishes

Rich Ermine of Royalty

It is the lowly weasel that furnishes the ermine of royalty and this member of the rodent family is common, writes an authority in the Detroit News.

The white fur is worn only by those members of the weasel family living in the northern part of the country where heavy snows are experienced, and then only in the winter time. During the winter months the fur of the northern weasel is all white excepting for a tip of black on the tail; but the weasels living in warmer climates, and the northern weasels in summer time, are commonly brown above and of a yellowish hue on the under parts of their bodies.

The weasel is probably the most bloodthirsty killer among all the smaller members of the animal kingdom. It is exceedingly lithe and agile and successfully attacks rabbits and other game animals many times its size. Loose in a chicken yard or any other place where prey is abundant, the weasel will kill much more than it possibly can eat. Many times it does not eat the flesh of its victims at all but contents itself with sucking some of their blood.

In some parts of the country the weasel is looked upon as beneficial because it feeds largely upon mice and other undesirable rodents; but anywhere near the farmer's chicken yard it is a bad actor and even in the open fields and woods away from cultivated areas it is doubtful if the good it does in destroying rodent pests can counterbalance the havoc it works among bird and small game animal life.

Many Uses for Old Bones Thrown Away Every Year

The millions of bones that are thrown away every year help to make a flourishing industry. Their by-products and uses are practically endless, and there is no waste.

Bones go through many stages. First they are boiled until all the fat is extracted; this is made into glycerine and certain types of lubricants. Skin and marrow bones are used for making handles. The rest are ground into fine powder in vast mills and have an infinite number of uses. A certain amount of this powder is used to make bone-manure and bone-meal for farmers. It is extremely valuable. Sugar, salt, and other refineries utilize bones in some of their refining processes. Bones are also used for case-hardening cast steel.

The worst part of old bones is their powerful and penetrating odor, which, strange to say, is not in the least harmful. Asthmatics and those suffering with lung trouble often find relief in such an atmosphere.—Montreal Herald.

First Laundries

Both the laundry and the detachable collar are a little more than a century old. The first collar was made by Mrs. Hannah Montague of Troy, N. Y., in 1825; she is said to have tired of washing her husband's shirts so often merely because the collar part was dirty, so she separated them with the scissors. Two years later Ebenezer Brown of that city began to make collars, called "string collars" because they were tied about the neck with a string. As a special business, the manufacture of collars was established by the firm of Montague and Granger at Troy in 1833. In 1835 Independence Stark of Troy established a laundry to take care of the product of his own factory and other nearby collar makers. A commercial laundry was started at Oakland, Calif., in 1851 to wash the clothes of gold miners. The first steam laundry was set up in 1863 at St. Charles and Monongahela house in Pittsburgh.

It also bears the distinction of being the smallest in the park system, being only one and a half square miles in area.
